Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 18 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rain clearing eastwards followed by sunshine and showers.

Today:
Rain, some heavy, moving eastwards followed by sunshine and scattered showers. More persistent rain and some hill snow in the NW. Windy and rather mild.

Tonight:
Showers, heaviest and most frequent in northwest with hill snow, clearing. Then dry and clear with frost in places. Cloud and rain across far west later with coastal gales.

Friday:
Rain, heavy and persistent in west especially over hills. Mainly dry in central and eastern areas, though outbreaks of rain spreading east through the day. Windy with coastal gales.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Wet and windy in the west Saturday, drier in the east. Often cloudy with some brighter spells Sunday and Monday, but rain and stronger winds in the west later. Mild.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.